SIBS MEET TOBIN

Judging by the smiles of delight on the faces of our campers, the future will certainly include spending time with animals. Campers were very curious about the animals that visited on Tuesday from the New Zoo. Learning about them and the care they require can teach us much about the care required by humans, especially if there are special needs.

For example, the campers learned that one of the animals was born with a calcium deficiency. That meant that its shell was very sensitive and fragile and couldn't play with other animals right away that might accidentally hurt him. But with extra nutrition given in some special food, lots of love, and time, the animal now plays with others. Which animal was it?

The campers were asked to be especially quiet for one of the animals because he had especially large ears to be able to hear his predators. His sensitivity had purpose, but sudden noises or loud sounds could make him very nervous and aggressive. Which animal was it?

Cassie the Zoo keeper introduced each animal by explaining their unique ability and how best to interact with them to keep the animal happy. Exactly what many of these siblings do to introduce the world to their siblings with special needs.

Who did you meet?

This is Tobin the tortoise. Can you name the other 4 animals you met on Tuesday? What do you know about each?
