Are you concerned about the future care and well-being of your sibling with disabilities and need some answers?

For adults who have a sibling with developmental disabilities or long-term illnesses, the journey together is lifelong. You may already be in a caregiving role or expect to in the future. This program helps you clarify your role and get the planning tools to move forward.

Journey Forward has one main goal— to help you move forward with a plan.

When you are finished with the program, you will have a written document which describes your sibling's desired future and a plan that includes practical directions and information for maintaining continuity in your sibling's daily life and needed supports to achieve desired outcomes.

Some call it peace of mind.

"Journey Forward gave me peace of mind and my sister a new life." Linda D.

"This program gave us helpful tools to have discussions in our family about planning. It was great to have conversations with other adult siblings at the workshops who are going through the same things as us. We were all able to laugh (and cry) together and praise each other about our accomplishments; which were huge!" Anne M.
